

How do I talk to my kids about violence?

Many kids are impacted by violence in their homes, schools, communities, from the media and most recently by the tragic events that transpired in the United States on September 11, 2001. For tips on talking to your kids about violence visit Talking with Kids, a joint effort of Children Now and the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation. In addition, here are some links that provide information designed to build understanding and to help adults and children cope with the trauma associated with the recent attacks on America.

About Our Kids

American Academy of Pediatrics

American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee

American Counseling Association

American Psychological Association

American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry

AMIDEAST

Arab American Institute

Child Care Exchange

Children's Defense Fund

Children Now

Connect for Kids

Helping.org

The National Child Care Information Center

National Institute of Mental Health

The Parent Center

Parenting Press

Purdue University Extension's Terrorism and Children resources

Zero to Three

FVPPF Fact Sheet: Children and Domestic Violence